

How big should I buy for outdoor lighting

Overview

---

What size outdoor light fixtures do I Need?

However, it's important to get the sizing right to avoid visually overwhelming or underwhelming effects. The size of outdoor lighting fixtures will depend on the height of your ceiling or the area you are trying to illuminate. Larger or taller spaces may require bigger light fixtures, whereas smaller spaces may need smaller ones.

How big should outdoor lights be on a door?

If two lights are used on either side of a door, the pieces used can be slightly smaller, say one-quarter the height of the entryway. The size of your outdoor lights can vary when placed beside an entryway for the best visual appeal. The fixtures should be mounted so that they are slightly above eye-level.

How do I Choose outdoor lighting?

When selecting outdoor lighting, location is key. It is important to consider the type of area you are lighting and the purpose of the lighting. For example, if you are looking to light a walkway or garden path, you will need different types of lights than if you are looking to light an outdoor patio or deck.

What size outdoor lights should be placed beside an entryway?

The size of your outdoor lights can vary when placed beside an entryway for the best visual appeal. The fixtures should be mounted so that they are slightly above eye-level. On a typical door this measures out to approximately 66 inches above the threshold of the door.
